

HESITATING HORSES REFUSE TO LEAP, BUT MUNCH AT HEDGES

Thoroughbreds Show Shocking Presence of Ordinary Appetites — Heavy Skies Threaten, But Crowd Braves.

The closing down mildly went with charmingly... Bryn Mawr, Pa., Sept. 25.—Dancing and hungry horses which did the hesitation, chewed hedges instead of jumping over them, and otherwise performed in a manner decidedly unclubby, featured the hunters and jumpers' class which was first judged today at the Bryn Mawr Horse Show.

MR. TOWNSEND THROWN. What at first looked like a serious accident happened early today at the Bryn Mawr home of John R. Valentine, when J. Taylor Townsend, of New York, was hurled to the ground by a vicious horse belonging to Robert L. Gerry, of New York.

HEAVY SKIES THREATEN. Gray skies and early clouds greeted early morning arrivals. But it takes more than these uncertainties to dampen the enthusiasm of a typical horse show crowd once spectators get the habit of being present at the judging.

INTEREST IN TODAY'S PROGRAM. Today's events comprise in their entirety probably one of the most interesting programs of the week. Hunters and jumpers figure particularly in the list.

HUNT CLASS WITH HOUNDS. Just before the closing event late this afternoon, a hunt class with hounds will be shown over the oval in front of the grandstand.

TODAY'S MARRIAGE LICENSES. William B. Nell, 2201 Madison Square, and Florence H. Hollis, 1215 S. Market st., Cecil, Pa. Married at 10:30 a. m. at the residence of the bride's parents.

TIDE OF MARTIAL FEELING TURNS TO WOEN IN GERMANY

English Correspondent Declares Hysterical Public Rejoicing Is Followed by Secret Mourning in Revealed Homes.

By STEPHEN BLACK. ROTTERDAM, Sept. 25. A fortnight ago a trustworthy, observant Dutch friend of mine was on the point of visiting Germany for reasons that concern nobody but himself. At my request he promised to bring back an accurate account of the state of the country. Yesterday he returned. What I write below is derived from a long and intimate conversation with him. It can be accepted as absolutely reliable.

THE SUMMARIES. Class 22, qualified or green hunters which have not won a ribbon at any of the recognized shows.—Won by Hamshah, owned by Robert L. Gerry, second, Branton, from Stronla Farm, third, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, fourth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, fifth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, sixth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, seventh, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, eighth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, ninth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry, tenth, Huntley, owned by Robert L. Gerry.

TOP COATS, FURS AND SOFT FELT HATS AT HORSE SHOW. Rainy-day Costume Most in Evidence at Bryn Mawr. Bryn Mawr, Pa., Sept. 25.—Top coats, furs and soft felt hats comprised the regulation costume at the Horse Show here this morning.

CHILDREN AS PREACHERS. Son of Minister at Stratford Tabernacle Preaches Striking Sermon. Without the slightest sign of nervousness, and with all the religious fervor and enthusiasm of one who has spent many years in the pulpit, the 14-year-old son of the Rev. Charles Forster, who has been conducting a mission at the Stratford Tabernacle, preached a striking sermon recently.

DIVERS MUST BE CAREFUL. Meet Numerous Dangers in Going Below Surface. Referring to the death of a diver wrecked on the Empress of Ireland, an English writer in the Manchester Guardian says that the first sensation felt when the diver goes down to 30 feet or so below the surface is a ringing in the ears.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY DIES. ROTTERDAM, Ont., Sept. 25.—Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, died here today. He was 74 years old. He served in the leadership of the Conservative opposition in 1888 and became Premier in 1892.

GERMAN WARNEYS AS TOGETHER FALSE, ONE FUGITIVE SAYS

Revolt in London, German Warships in Thames and Barbarities of Allies Alleged by Teutonic Press, Is Woman's Story.

LONDON, Sept. 25. An English woman, who arrived yesterday at Rotterdam from Bremen gives a graphic description of some of the scenes witnessed in Germany, and the northern cities of Germany, and describes the state of the people as panicky. She brought with her a batch of German newspapers which show how the German people are being deceived as to the real progress of the war.

FEELING BELGIUM'S AGONY. Each day there rushes into Berlin another frightened horde of East Prussians. The agony that for five weeks past has been Belgium's has now begun to be Prussia's. Ah, the savage, the barbarian! This is what Berlin says, although of all the fugitives who have arrived none has any evidence to offer that the much-maligned Cossacks have committed one-millionth of the Ulian atrocities performed in Belgium.

ACCURATE BRITISH SHOOTING. But side by side appeared other paragraphs which indicate more truly the desperate plight of Germany. The press has now organized a campaign to protest against the cruel nature of the wounds inflicted on the Germans by the English. It is one thing to cut the throats of Belgians, but quite another to help British bullets and bayonets! Apparently British soldiers are shooting and striking with terrible accuracy.

SEEK DUTCH AID. My Dutch friend informed me that the Germans were intruding desperately to obtain illegitimate help in Holland. They are no longer quite so eager to make war in the Dutch Republic as they were in the one case they fear an invasion by the entire Continent. But secretly German agents are working without cessation in the Netherlands. They recently made desperate efforts to purchase for $10,000 a day a yacht worth $200,000 and which they intended to use for the purpose of laying a mine-laying in the Channel.

WOMAN'S STORY. The papers in Bremen, she says, were plastered daily with such headlines as "Victory on the Rhine" and "The British warships have been destroyed, and even a German cruiser had entered the Thames, not across it, but under it." The Kaiser's kingdom people have been taught that tears are a symbol of weakness. But indoors they flow as freely as the blood which is causing them elsewhere.

Harrison Estate Heirs Win Suit Against the Executors.

The case was brought by Theodore L. Harrison and The Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit and Insurance Company, executors under the will of Joseph Harrison, Jr., deceased, against the city.

BULLET STOPS FLEEING MAN. Policeman Shoots Suspect When He Refuses to Halt. CHESTER, Pa., Sept. 25.—Charles Taylor, alias John Smith, who, with a companion, had been taken into custody early this morning, was later shot by Policeman Hanley. Taylor fell with a bullet in the back when he tried to flee. He was removed to the Chester Hospital. His condition is serious.

Richardson, of Worcester County, notified detectives here yesterday of the elopement and asked them to watch trains from the South.

GEORGE W. VALENTINE. Death from an attack of heart disease came yesterday to George W. Valentine, 1625 Vine street, who for many years had kept his fish store in the Reading Terminal Market.
